Some instruments use both clefs like the piano. This type of notation was first used in the late Middle Ages and it has been used for keyboard etc. The comparable organ score exists as well, usually in association with church music for voices and orchestra, such as arrangements by later hands of Handel's Messiah.

Look at the C major scale again on the keyboard. Do you see the difference? This has been done not only with folk or traditional music etc. Since the melody is not included in chord-only fake books, lead instrument players are expected to know the melody.
