The little boy is in the tree house for a lot of the book talking about how hard it is for him that his friend has passed. A super emotional read multi-hanky for me as my 11yo daughter recently lost a beloved classmate and friend very suddenly. So sad such a good book to help kids with grief. MaryBahr's evocative text con If Nathan were here, we would meet in our tree fort. The emotions of carefree happiness before the child's death and poignant grief afterward are beautifully handled. Nathan's best friend changes some of his actions in honor of Nathan. MaryBahr who described herself as a librarian by profession and an author by two peas in a pod, the boys spend precious time in their treehouse, practice their speeches for show and tell, jump in the puddles on the way to school.
