BP uses ficamos conversando "we kept on talking" and ele trabalha cantando "he sings while he works"but rarely ficamos a conversar and ele trabalha a cantar as is the case in most varieties of EP. A mencao a carica foi relativamente a resposta do JorgeB. Brazilians, when concerned with pronunciation, look up to what is considered the national standard variety, and never the European one.

All of the CPLP countries have signed the reform. There are various differences between European Portuguese and Brazilian Portuguese, such as the dropping of the second-person conjugations and, in some dialects, of the second-person pronoun itself in everyday usage and the use of subject pronouns ele, ela, eles, elas as direct objects. Chamar 'call' is normally used with the preposition de in BP, especially when language professors frequently use the L-variant while explaining students the structure and usage of the H-variant; in essays, nevertheless, all students are expected to use H-variant.
