Aspects of surrealism and the landscape of the Aegean Islands dominate Elytis's poetry. Odysseus Elytis's eightieth birthday, on 2 November was widely celebrated in Greece. After leaving law school in Elytis displayed several visual collages at the time. He chose not to publish under the name of Alepoudelis to avoid associations with his family's popular soap-manufacturing business. In Exi ke mia tipsis yia ton ourano ; Six and One Remorses for the Sky Elytis furthers his effort to reconcile elements of the dualism of human existence. Elytis pronounced dee-LEE-tis won the Nobel Prize for Literature in the Sweden and abandoned the family name as a young man in order to disassociate his writing from the family soap business. Elytis' poetry has marked, through an active presence of over forty years, a broad spectrum.
